I just called to let you know
I've been thinking about how home is where the heart is
The recent unpleasantries relocated from my sleeve
Losing face and losing and losing sleep

Your apology may come to late
But here is one promise that I won't break
This will be the first time
I say this for the last time
It's your one chance to come clean

This will be the first time
I say this for the last time

Aint' it funny how time shows
As it flies by, the things that we want aren't what we need
The silence that once was sweet, smells of regret and nicotine
Hoping against tragedy

Your apology may come to late
But here is one promise that I won't break
This will be the first time
I say this for the last time
It's your one chance to come clean

This will be the first time
I say this for the last time

It kills to hear you say, that forever you will stay
Cause I got a feeling that forever's only fourteen days

This will be the first time
I say this for the last time
It's your one chance to come clean

And this will be the first time
I say this for the last time

And this will be the first time

I say this for the last time
It's your one chance to come clean
