Waking up to car alarms
A million people playing their part Overwhelmed by the size of all that is and all that we've got
This should be the center
This should be the time of our lives

It seems like everything we build
You tear it down again only to replace it with something bigger still
And it's never running out
It's never running out
Like all of these ideas
It's never running out

I can still taste yesterday
And yesterday is pushing me on
Out of music
Out of art
Out of fashion
Into your arms
This should be the center
This should be the time of our lives

It seems like everything we build
You tear it down again only to replace it with something
bigger still
And it's never running out
It's never running out
Like all of these ideas
I will let you in on this

It seems like everything we build
You tear it down again only to replace it with something
bigger still
And it's never running out
It's never running out
Like all of these ideas
It's never running out
