A tree has grown on the spot
Where her body did rest
Blood seeped in the soil
From the knife in her chest

The bugs serve time in her skeletal jail
I wonder how the bugs remember Gail

What a lovely young girl
Everybody would say

You can still hear her laugh
In the shadows on a cold winter's day

A dog dug up a bone and wagged it's tail
I wonder how that Dog remembers Gail

The bugs serve time in her skeletal jail
I wonder how that IÂ'll remember Gail
