Millions wander around this place
Bewildered wonder on their face
There's something electric

Jagged rocks that reach and pry
Water falls through shattered sky
There's something electric

Silent impact
As the fountain meets its fate
There's something electric

(Chorus)
Be still, don't try to explain
Keep listening
Oh, just know
That God made you something electric

Rising in the east
The horizon is alive
There's something electric

Crimson splashes
Chips the break of day
There's something electric

Could it be the colors?
Could it be the way the sun chases the night away?
I don't know but there's something electric

(Chorus)

(Light decides to rest while evening takes center stage Shadows grow, making crosses seem more like skyscrapers
The dust innocently passes while His mother pauses to weep
She seems Him hanging there like some link between severed loves
Or some ornament of divine madness
But in His last breath, in His last thought
He knew you were something electric)

(Chorus)
