I wish I was in your soul where you could feel me
And you know I'd always be apart of you And everything I'd feel and everything I'd be would always start with you
If there were prices to pay
Would you give it away?
This world is so ugly and I've seen enough
Sometimes I'd rather be blind or deaf
But I would keep the sweet sounds of your unmistakable voice
That keeps doing rounds in my head
If there were prices to pay
Would you give it away

We were posing for pictures that were never taken
And I couldn't crack one more smile without breaking down
Without breaking down
Surviving on my second chances
I'm still scraping by on my memories
And I will leave with you embellished words
And fragmented dreams of these things
When there were prices to pay
Would you give it away

We were posing for pictures that were never taken
And I couldn't crack one more smile without breaking
down
Without breaking down
Cause I'm lost in photographs with you
Would you give yourself away

We were posing for pictures that were never taken
And I couldn't crack one more smile without breaking
down
Without breaking down
