You're walking away again
I'm watching my old best friend
Turn their back on me
Growing up wasn't easy
And all that I was before
It fell through a slamming door.
You're still pulling me under, with you

And I still believe that everything will turn out right

And all that was said and done
I know I'm the lucky one
Cause you never stopped trying
Even though I've been lying, to myself
And I still believe that everything will turn out right

And I have counted all the cars
From these interstate backyards
That always find me among faces I don't know
And I'll be wondering where you are Lying underneath the stars
That always remind me, that I am still alone
I'm still alone

And I still believe that everything will turn out right
