I kept up my balance but you take my side very little these days
And feelings we shared have died like the sun, another today
You're painting your mirror, living your life your own way
But where is the price that you pay

I guess it's good you don't try to pretend love is real I guess it's good you could leave and not care how I feel
I guess it's none of my business who you want to be
I guess I'm lucky the new you still wants the old me

I must be lucky, must really be something, to be chosen by you
But would someone stronger, with prettier eyes be equally good Oh if I'm nice to be seen with I'm quite a reflection of you Like everyone cares what you do

I guess it's good you don't try to pretend love is real
I guess it's good you could leave and not care how I
I guess it's none of my business who you want to be
I guess I'm lucky the new you still wants the old me

I've been in this place before,
Shown the light, shown the door
Taking it hard now, taking it hard now

When I hear the ship's been sunk
I float away like broken junk
Taking it hard now, taking it hard now

Your life is easy to rearrange But me I'm been through it all
And they must leave the change

I'll take one last look at you And do just like you told me to

Making it easy, making it easy
Making it easy, making it easy

I guess it's good you could leave and not care how I
I guess it's none of my business who you want to be
I guess I'm lucky the new you still wants the old me
