Out on the fairway the bite is oh so sharp.
But we've got blankets and stars that should burn us
like suns.
The sky over this town is so clear at night.
But our heads are clouded from these drinks that fuel
these fights.

Will you please hold me down in this seaside town
before I explode?
I'll tell you everything, I'll tell you everything you want to know.

Driving through this town, who would have thought?
That so many kids here, so many kids are in love.
And honey you you're sitting next to one.
So roll the window down, this air is scarce, you steal it from my lungs.

You want to know.

So now you know it is you.
