I knew you, you knew me, and saw God change you into someone so new, im so glad I knew you. And your life told so much, but sometimes it's so hard to see the way God sees, I can't see the reason. But in a play it's hard to see, if all we see is one scene. And I know today you're in a better place, it's just hard today, to see Gods way. I know today you're in a better place, it's just hard today to see Gods way. But I know today. Today seems less without you, your smile was always new and always true, im so glad I knew you. And your life told so much, but sometimes it's so hard to see the way God sees, I can't see the reason. But in a play it's hard to see, if all we see is one scene. And I know today you're in a better place, it's just hard today, to see Gods way. I know today you're in a better place, it's just hard today to see Gods way. But I know today. Tragedy, questions our sanity, second guess theology, leads to despondency, despondency turns into atrophy, so hard for us to see, the way that God sees. I know today you're in a better place, it's just hard today, to see Gods way. But I know today you're in a better place, it's just hard today to see Gods way. I know today, but it's hard today.
