Call me crazy but I swear she was here, her warm body next to mine
I can still see her smile and those hazel eyes. The faded t shirt she wore on that night I'm a dreamer but now my eyes wide cause' I can feel her finger nails on my skin It's like I'm watching from the outside, peering into the world she's livin' in

On a hazy summer night, she turned and disappeared into the sky

Out of the night she calls my name
And a silhouette appears in front of me
Telling me secrets she never told to a soul
Made a promise never to give up on the world

My eyes lazy but I can feel her right here and I can still taste the red wine
But in the moonlit night and a cloud lit sky, she opened her wings and took flight It's not my imagination, I'm fine cause' I can see her walking down my empty street And then she kissed me for the last time and faded into a distant memory

I found safety in her eyes. Then she turned and disappeared into the sky

Out of the night she calls my name
And a silhouette appears in front of me
Telling me secrets she never told to a soul
Made a promise never to give up on the world

Out of the night she comes in a dream
And a silhouette appears in front of me
Telling me secrets she never told to a soul
Made a promise never to give up on the world

No, she'll never give up on the world

Out of the night she calls my name
And a silhouette appears in front of me
Telling me secrets she never told to a soul
Made a promise never to give up on the world
