The world's on fire, you better drop and roll
Take off your shoes, and those dirty clothes
Cry enough to laugh, spend all your dimes
Trade away your gold, it don't mean a thing

And that is all, I can say

It's the same old wars, with the same old songs
And the same I'll fortunes, stealing our souls
Drink your sour sweet, take your bitter warm
Make your mess neat, and have your chaos calm

And that is all, I can say to you
That is all, I can say to you
That is all, I think I'm gonna to say

So the world's on fire, check your bags and go
Get drunk and laugh, until your lost and cold
And to warm your feet, to warm your toes
Try to find sincerity, among all these bones

And that is all, I can say to you
That is all, I can say to you
Yeah and that is all, I think I'm gonna to say

Your innocence is too late, your innocence is too late
Your innocence is too late, your innocence is too late
Your innocence is too, your innocence is too
Your innocence is, too late, your innocence is too late
