1964

I'll never forget when you walked through that door oh, god you were my James Dean and I was your dream

19 still dreaming like a baby that's when I had our first child through our son I became a woman and you became a man and you looked at me, and I looked at you we both smiled because there was nothing we could do and I was crazier than you but you loved me

I was crazier then you baby you loved me I was crazier in denim blue and coffee for you crazy love grows sour so we had to pull through and I found refuge in god and I guess you just found you so I found refuge in god and I guess you just found you

nothing we could do
and I was still crazier than you ya, you loved me

I was crazier than you and baby you loved me I was crazier in denim blue and coffee for you baby I was crazier in summertime on P-town wine crazy I was crazy

30 years have now gone by we sit silently together and cry and my James Dean still holds me tight while thoughts of forgiveness creep through the night and memories

and you looked at me, and I looked at you we both smile because there was nothing we can do and I'm still crazier than you ya, you love me, you love me, you loved me
