These are your first steps on your own,
The farthest youve ever come from the safety of your home.
For so long youve been waiting just to leave this life
behind,
And anxious to get on with what will be.

Oh the things, that you'll see
Oh the things, that you'll see

And as time goes, more and more,
You're farther away from all you knew before.

You're turning your collar to the cold.
You wanted to see the world, but now you're getting old.

And after all you think it might be time you settled down,
And when you return to where you used to be

Oh the things, that you'll see
Oh the things, that you'll see

After all the years you roamed
You're finally glad to call this place your home.

Oh the things, that you'll see.
Oh the things, that you'll see.

And you're finding, more and more,
You never really knew what you thought you knew before.
