Mother, did you watch?
Everything is sold
Mother, can't you tell the new routine
It went so well?

I was worried just a touch
That it might have been too much
Just a bit, well, rather, free

But just listen to that crowd
Why, they've never been so loud
Screaming only for me

Meg

And the master must have heard
Every note and every word
Mother, tell me, did he see?

Meg, stop it

Even he will now concede
I'm the only he'll need

Mother, what's wrong?

Meg, sweet fool
You did all that you could
Shining bright
And yet still not enough

Wh-what do you mean?

How you danced
They're all entranced
Yes, all but the one
Whose entrancement we sought

He wasn't there?

Where, poor girl
Do you think that he was?

Yes, that's right
In with her all along

With Christine?

Claiming of their son they love
Too smitten to spare you
One moment of thought

But you said

All that you gave him
It's all been a waste

You were wrong

All that you've done
It has all been a waste

Don't say that

Now he has them
As for us we have
Both been replaced

No
