Your red hair and your curly locks and I are lost without you.

I'm so scared of what it costs and what it meant to doubt you.

It's the cynical attitude that we shared.

We take it to make it through, but to where?

I'm alright and I'm okay.

And I'm not half the man I thought I was, but I'll still smile and say.

I'm alright and I'm okay.

Cause I lost everything to have a destiny.

I cut my hair, and then dye it black, but will I laugh without you?

I'm so scared that I might have to be a man without you.

It's the typical language that we share pretending it's vanished while we swear, we swear.

I'm alright and I'm okay.

I'm only half the man I thought I was, but I'll still smile and say.

I'm alright and I'm okay.

Cause I lost everything to have a destiny.

And I lost everything.

And I lost everything.

To be me, to be me.

I'm alright and I'm okay.

I'm alright and I'm okay.

I'm alright and I'm okay.

I'm alright and I'm okay.

I'm alright and I'm okay.

And I'm not half the man I thought I was, but I'll still smile and say.

I'm alright and I'm okay.

Cause I lost everything to have a destiny.

To have a destiny.
