Written by Kevin Heybourne

Recorded at the Troubadour, Los Angeles, CA

In the middle of last night she went out to get her revenge

On the black witches they tried to kill her
They tried to sacrifice and burn her soul in flames
Some unknown force came and freed her

Burn the white witch
Burn the white witch

Death bears a sickly smile, will the fools ever learn
They still smile when their own death is near
She has got more power than you will ever know
They tried to harm but it's too late

Burn the white witch
Burn the white witch
Standing by your shadow
You're eyes are full of tears
You cannot seem to unwind yourself
You have killed death and fear
Forever and ever we are free
Together forever for eternity
She died early this morning from the spells of the dead
Death had its own way and won
Now she can rest in peace and sleep inside her grave
She cannot be harmed anymore
Burn the white witch
Burn the white witch
