A snake has bitten me, it has made me weak,
God's betrayed me, playing hide and seek.
So much joy keeps slipping through my fingers, so much pain I've chosen on my way.

Seven serpents lying on my bed of fire, oh how real the dream appears,
how strong the dark desire.
Hold me like our love was in its sweet beginning, whisper all those lies you know I long to hear.

But you say that
Poison is drowning my poor heart
Poison is killing out our spark
Poison has made its ways in me
Poison let me go peacefully

Standing on the porch with a burning torch
Looking at the dark skies of Eden

Be my exorcist, drive the bad away
The lonely violinist plays and turns the sheets of days

So much joy you've laid upon my sorrow
So much shame you've taken of my name

You say that
Poison is drowning my poor heart
Poison is killing out our spark
Poison has made its ways in me
Poison let me go peacefully

Standing on the porch with a burning torch
Looking at the dark skies of Eden

Looking at the dark skies, looking at the dark skies of
Eden
Eden

Poison is drowning my poor heart

Poison is killing out our spark
Poison has made its ways in me
Poison you and I eternally

Standing on the porch with a flaming torch
Looking at the dark skies of Eden
