Walking down the streets that we grew up in
But today is not the same
It's like a different town
A different place, a different name

I kick my heels against the curb
Throw a stone to where you live
To hoping I'll see you again
Hope is low, will you show?

And I remember that day saved us
The way you kissed me and the salt,
It filled my eyes
We remember our California
The night we slept along the shore and washed away

Lying on the sand, the waves are talking
And the humming of the trains
But it's a different sound
A different cloud, a different rain

My blood flows faster with every thought
Of everything that happened here
And it takes the pain away
Hope is low, will you show again?

And I remember that day that saved us
The way you kissed me and the salt,
It filled my eyes
We remember our California
The night we slept along the shores and washed
awayay

I remember the day that saved us
The way you kissed me and the salt,
It filled my eyes

And I remember that day that saved us
The way you kissed me and the salt,
It filled my eyes
We remember our California
The night we slept along the shores and washed

awayay

Do you remember it?
I still remember this
Do you remember me?
