I was drunk, sober, tarnished, and pure
All I ever wanted was a little bit more
I had eyes that were heavy, sickly, and sore
Blacked-out windows, and a bolt on the door
I was shell-shocked, shaken from the world outside
I had voices come and wake me in the dead of the night
At the end of the tunnel, they say there's a light
I hope there's more to living than just being alive!

Cause the blind truth!
It'll find you!
In the end, it's all that's waiting!
Yeah, the blind truth!
It'll find you!
In the end, it's all that's waiting for you!

I was judge, jury, witness in one
I put myself on trial for the things I'd done
I was forced to stare and look at now at what I'd become
Cold and unforgiving like the face of a gun
But underneath my skin, I felt my blood so warm
Waking up my senses, like the day I was born
I was the sickness, and I was the cure
I never felt I'd ever feel so safe and secure!

In the blind truth!
It'll find you!
In the end, it's all that's waiting!
Yeah, the blind truth!
It'll find you!
In the end, it's all that's waiting for you!

It's the eyes that just your reflection know.
It's the whispering that you hear when you're alone
It's all I know.

I felt the blood, beneath my skin
It was so warm
It was just like the very first day I was born

Yeah, the blind truth!
It'll find you!
In the end, it's all that's waiting!
In the blind truth!
It'll find you!
In the end, it's all that's waiting
Always watching, always patient
In the end, it's always waiting for you!
