Contingencies

You have no choice in this

We're brought into a world where judgement's made on face value

Desperation turned inward and another face frozen in time with disregard for substance

Billboard girls your smile looks so fake, the rain, your only tears, your eyes are dripping black

A false appearance

A brainwashing

Perfection unattainable

Image destroys the female youth

Is this innocence lost? Pass along your self-loathing with images in magazines to someone new who can bear your burden

You're whole world is falling down

Plastic dolls

Lifeless and parallel to our new way of being

Plastic dolls I beg you ask this question

What you have left if your skin was taken away? Who would you be? No one

Nothing

It stops here and now so someday a new face can offer a different answer
