What do your words mean when you can't say that you really think because you're too afraid to fight to stand up for what you believe? You cover with apologies because you think you've crossed a line with assholes who you've let control you, thinking it safe to stand aside. Show some fucking spine or keep your mouth shut. Scream the words that you believe and face the ones who disagree and if you hit the ground then hit the ground swinging. Show some fucking spine or keep your mouth shut. By now we should know better than to enter battles of principle with any less than all we have. If your values are based solely on a need to be accepted
