For every soul there is a midnight
When it's silent in the room but loud inside
You lie awake what seems like forever
And you wrestle with the big stuff that cannot be denied

All of life has led you to this moment

When the time comes and the games are finally over
There's no more pretending all charades are done
And the time comes when the soul is finally ready
You know the truth and this time you don't run
God is waiting there, you'll find when the time comes

For every soul there is a dawning, yeah
When we see there's more to life than we believed Faith is that one road that's left to travel
But it means we have to start to trust what we can't see

Then at last we chose to take that first step

When the time comes and the games are finally over
There's no more pretending all charades are done
And the time comes when the soul is finally ready
You know the truth and this time you don't run, no no
Oh God is waiting there, you'll find when the time comes

He'll rush, He'll reach
He'll run, He'll do
Anything to get to you

Oh when the time comes and the games are finally over
There's no more pretending now all charades are done
And the time comes when the soul is finally ready
You know the truth and this time you don't run, oh

When the time comes you know about what it takes He's gonna be there

He'll rush, He'll reach

He'll do whatever it takes
When the time comes
