

Armada

"Crimson Winter Sunrise"

Visit "Crimson Winter Sunrise" on MotoLyrics.com

Deep down in the desert of my heart
I have always tried to be a true and honest friend
Was it the shine of your eyes
Or was it something in the way you smiled,
The way you talked
That brought suspicion to my mind

Out there in the fields so pure and white
I realize our love has faded
I never saw you with respect
And now you're gone
You turned away and left me broken
On a crimson winter sunrise

Closed up in my chamber of despair
I try to bury every memory rushing through my head
I can't believe that you're gone, I can't imagine that
It's over now
I made mistakes
I know! - too many to forgive?

Pain is turning into agony
And still you keep your sweet temptation
I wish I could make things undone
Now it's too late
And with a tear I watch you leaving
On a crimson winter sunrise

Silent winter hear my cry
Hide me in safety 'till once again I'm

Out there in the fields so pure and white
To realize our love has faded
I never saw you with respect
And now you're gone
You turned away and left me broken
On a crimson winter sunrise

Visit Armada page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.

