Seems like everything is faded by now
Because nobody is ever around
Thousands of miles, so far from you
Running in circles without a clue
They keep their secrets like no one else
Playing the damn fool because it sells

There's nothing to say and nothing to do
Every memory has been forgotten by you
Wanted to be there, you're left at home
You hate to be single, yet you're alone
Radiant beauty from someone else's fate
Love is a strong word, but so is hate

Give me your tired, your hungry, your poor
Doesn't make a difference since you shut the door
Evacuate yourself from what you once knew
The role of a stranger fits you like a shoe
Give me a hint of what you think is right
I gave you darkness when you took my light
