If you jump i jump. it's only a fall. we'll both crash at the bottom to get back to the top of the world. how cool would it be to swim through the sky? let's go. you know that i will not leave you alone. how will we get to the bottom? we'll sink like stones. all our dreams float and we fall into the ocean. in the river that overlooks the city come and waste some time with us today away from everything and away from all the rain. away. yeah. Underneath the river that leaks into the ocean we peeled back the sunrise so we can fly under this endless sky and compete with the source of light. if you jump i jump. it's only a fall. we'll both crash at the bottom to get back to the top of the world. We fly on the border line of new jersey sky and crash into delaware. in the river that overlooks the scenery come and paint the sky blue with me. we'll wash the clouds away and ride them to our escape away from this place. i can save the day. Underneath the river, swimming in the ocean, we were caught flying higher then we ever imagined, even though we are underground. if you jump i jump. it's only a fall. we'll both crash at the bottom to get back to the top of the world and take pictures of our broken hearts from far away, where we are safe to stand on the edge of a burning bridge looking down on our graves. we can smile and say, "we know we're awake. it's just a lucid dream." we're in a lucid dream. stay awake. i could take my poison out and spit it in their face. they're a day away from our dream
