If it's mine to give it's gone lost or left somewhere along the way and forgive my honesty but you can have all I'll never be one day machines will quit and the ones like me who don't see fit to play a part will move along with no pity for the deadest ones and everyone with a soul will fall in love buildings bend and punchclocks rust for everyone in the dust who can't recall smokestacks choke and billboards fall a painting hung on every wall can I be this miserable? will it count to be this careful? and if everyone's this sad and cold please pass the fucking pill

I've seen everything to see and I can't breathe around such company if it only proves my frailty I denounce humanity
