We almost made it to the first half of a life we settled on in this desert world if all of these mountains are the oyster's shell then we built this life here around the only pearl if all of those holiday and birthdays become just punctuation tell me what's the text coz now it's dry and it's drying up my insides and my memory of you tell what comes next the TV was on as I remember everyday
and the years blur out
monotony just paints and stays now it's all coming down to who gets What and What it's all impersonal these legal documents yeah, why am I surprised? you get the house I get the furniture the clock, you get the dog I get the lawn tools and the tandem bike I can't look you in the eye the TV was on as I remember everyday
monotony just paints and stays
now it feels so useless waking up now
