verse1:

mom always used to tell me when younger i was too nice didnt know what she meant but then i paid the price had a couple friendships that i had to slice jealousy a silly game but then i rolled the dice after all i couldnt hate my haterz never too much nice swag durags plush couch and such haterz hate what you have and it might not be much just a cool amazing dude personality touch up on my appearence like every day like please dont be jealous in every way i like your fit too and you got nice pay being nice is the price when you rocking this way like i have been through so much and this the last thing i need fake friends jealousy low esteem and greed but i never gave in cause i had to succeed need that man up above to feel in all my needs chorus:

can i get a stadium floor to shoutout to you more i need real friends think i only got four need my ride or dies to come open that door hataz bout to destroy like yes to the core what the hell are you waiting for if you a fake friend i will be no more need all my real peeps to open that door
