[Verse 1 : Ayo & Saul Williams]

Tangled in a web of belief and disbelief, entertaining possibilities other worldliness civility I was born of an ancient land beheld on modern feet I was torn from my mothers hand and sworn not to repeat all the lives I've lived before, before life taught me death
I was kissed by a gentle wind and given back my breath and with this, I've learned to sing before I learned to cry to the heights, of the angels wings who taught me how to fly and I'm flying over misery and all that it could bring and I'm dancing over history and I'm uncrowning the king for the throne he once sat upon is seated in my heart I made room to invite you in then took the room apart cause the heart, is an open space not invitation only love arrived looked me in the face as if the truth were lonely but the truth is beyond belief as love is without reason so the moon cried the mellow leaf of cycle end of season
and the leaf it will change and fall before new days arisen but my love I am here to stay, a kiss within a vision of a forest filled with laughter filled with sorrow from every tree
this new season is forever, but in sprout beyond belief.
