Every rainbow has to have an end
A pot of gold or dreams foretold may not be there my friend
In this high and mighty world we live in Sometimes we have to break, sometimes we have to bend
Until the good times come again

I'll see you then, when the good times come again
When you and I have made it back
From the people and the places we have been
I'll see you then, when the good times come again
The door that we go out of is the door that we come in
When the good times come again
When the good times come again

Hope we both survive the world out there You'll never know what wind will blow so don't forget I care
And don't forget the way we felt together Sometimes we have to hold to all the good that's been
Until the good times come again

I'll see you then, when the good times come again

When you and I have made it back
From the people and the places we have been
I'll see you then, when the good times come again
The door that we go out of is the door that we come in
When the good times come again
When the good times come again

I'll see you then, when the good times come again
When you and I have made it back
From the people and the places we have been
I'll see you then, when the good times come again
The door that we go out of is the door that we come in
When the good times come again

I'll see you then, when the good times come again
When you and I have made it back
From the people and the places we have been

The door that we go out of is the door that we come in
When the good times come again
