I am the driver
thought we'd be together how stupid of me now you're too tired to answer or you can't recall you called you'll die in that town unknown in all we were women we took place in the streets laid down carefully behind the factory you were always special everybody sang it you used to be so special especially when you ruined it love passes by so lost sometimes and sometimes I am the driver I am what makes you think you're not lovable what makes you shy away from those who could prove you wrong we were swimmers we played among the trees you kissed me carefully it doesn't matter now no more together or warm spring rain no more cities no more joy no more heartbreak no more love no more d.i.y. no more destroy no more laughter no more hurt no more counselling or feeling like dirt no more friends or people to hate no more hugs or coffee breaks no more fear or getting along no more talking no more songs no more walks no silent drives no more your breathing your scent your eyes no more your movements your truth your lies

no more cities no more joy

I've already said that I've said enough
I've said enough
I've said enough
I've said enough
I've said enough
I've said enough
I've said enough
I've said enough
