Sweet simple song of different lights and different shades

The sound of life erupts and fades
And all the world must play along
My life has been a song

Here as I sleep, the love I dream will gently creep Inside my heart I softly keep
The tune that plays too long
My life has been a song

Every sound in my head
Every word that I said is like a melody, melody
That no little person like me could ever change
Every sound in the street
All the cold and the heat is like a symphony, symphony
Which has never before been rearranged

Sweet simple song of different lights and different shades

The sound of life erupts and fades
And all the world must play along
My life has been a song

Every sound in my head
Every word that I said is like a melody, melody, melody
That no little person like me could ever change
Every sound in the street
All the cold and the heat is like a symphony, symphony,
symphony
Which has never before been rearranged

Sweet simple song of different lights and different shades

The sound of life erupts and fades
And all the world must play along
My life has been a song

Every sound in my head
Every word that I said is like a melody, melody, melody
That no little person like me could ever change
Every sound in the street

All the cold and the heat is like a symphony, symphony,
symphony
Which has never before been rearranged
