Would you lay me down?
And would you lay me down in vain?
'Cause here lies before you
Your son's holy ghost
He's dug you up

Wake before the morrow
Accept nothing but the pain
See the sun forgives you
Leaves nothing but a stain

To me it begs the question
Would you even want to have him back?
The eternal's shadow
This humanity I lack

And as I hide behind my smoke screen of dismay
The minutes crawl across the clock out in the hall
Each breath from me that reluctantly escapes
Is one more than what I granted you to take

Wake before the morrow
Accept nothing but the pain
See the sun forgives you
Leaves nothing but a stain
Wake before the morrow
Accept nothing but the pain
See the sun forgives you
Leaves nothing but a stain
