"A Little Parade"

Pull a blanket over me, I'm ready for a long night's sleep In black and white they'll come to me, images I never seek Dream away...I long to be in the back seat of my Rolls Joyce, dream away And as the city slips backwards, soon I'll only hear the engine noise

It's a little parade, here comes everyone I know
I'm asleep in the shade as they pass my window
It's the priest from Nilly, it's Jo from the store
Another looks silly, never seen him before
It's a little parade

The only dream I ever had in color was of you and me
You and me, alone in a boat on the open sea
Anchors down
We walk up to the bow and let that anchor down
Anchors down
I love that splashing sound

It's a little parade, here comes everyone I know
I'm asleep in the shade as they pass my window
They peek through the glass of tainted blue
People that served me, people untrue
It's a little parade, here comes everyone I know
It's a harlequinade, as they pass my window
And I am the anchor, I drift low and high Slowly transforming into a bottomless sigh
It's a little parade
