and I want to forget
and I want to forgive you
to forgive you well I was born among it and I watched it die but my silent cry couldn't break through their wall they couldn't hear my call

I asked him and he told me that he didn't really love me and I cried that night
and I cried that night
and he never tucks me in anymore

I miss the smelled when we'd when we'd watch the football games and he'd curse the player's names he'd ask me if I loved him and I said that I did I always looked up to him and we laughed all night we laughed all night but he never tucks me in anymore the last time I talked to him I was just fourteen so grown up it seemed but I needed him he told me that he'd find himself another family to love and I asked him if he loved me but he didn't understand he didn't understand

and I will cause I did it without you you'd be so proud of me if you could be and I still love you but I've let go now
and I'm at peace and I hope you are too
you are too
