she talks to him and the words they run all over like a swig of gin he licks his lips to taste again she cracks a smile and she turns her eyes away from him

her thought rose up to the place where thoughts begin and their atoms moved and did a little dance to create the mood to make the trance and they stood at the edge of the earth to see the view they threw stones into space and she fell and he did too

uh oh

she cradles him in her tiny trembling hands she sings to him a song they sang as time began he falls asleep his swollen eyes against her she strokes his hair and hears them coming up the stairs

and away they go with the other stars on a crowded train with the little bars

and they stood at the edge of the earth to see the view
uh oh

they threw stones at her and the blood flowed warm against her back she closed her eyes and waited for the pain to stop he blocks the sun a halo cast around his head the sincerity of his eyes fills her with wonderment his words are calm a gentle wave of trust he lifts her up out of the dust

and they stood at the edge of the earth to see the view
la da da da da daâ€¦.
