"Chicago, is next.."

[Larry Milla]

Learn to see everything that's around you without using your eyes

Sometimes it's beyond that Sometimes it's just about learning to feel a situation

And let yourself totally be exposed to things but block out all negative energies

It's almost just like, you have shielding

Something that you will read about in a science fiction book

Where a man can walk into a room with 20,000 degree flames

and not be scathed

Cause his mind has been hardened or tempered like steel to neglect, or maybe, to negate that energy

To protect himself from the evil things in his environment

or the hard situations, which might cause pain to the flesh

These are the things that our type need to master

To make ourselves stronger Like biblical figures, who walked through fires inside of a furnace and came out unscathed

And then the king could not realize the powers of their Lord

Which was only in their mind

For they had faith in themselves and all that was around them

And they did not let the fire consume them

A fire which might be, likened to things like hate and envy

and lust, things that are insidious and control you and devour you from the inside

Which leave you just a shell of the man

Something that can be easily crushed

Not the statue of stone, a pillar of raw energy that stood once before

You have become something less More like a beast or an animal that is surely misled you must be the one to guide your own light Or maybe follow your own path
And create something that is truly yours
And that ability is innate, it's within you But often finding that sometimes is the maze And there's so many people that get locked in that maze and they're.. being chased by minotaurs and other minions of Greek mythology that keep them caught up and trapped and, cringing in corners wondering when daylight will approach them But when it does approach us be willing to accept it with open arms Letting your heart spill out the angst that has tr..
troubled you or plagued you through the years
Be willing, to be open, to be free And to let yourself escape the torment For that's all that it is And that's all that life is
