Written by Gene Stashuk

See what you're doin' to me
I open my eyes and I can hardly see
Looking around in the basement chairs
And all the time I know there's no one

Why won't you listen to me?
Just open your eyes and you'll appear to me
I don't care if there's no one there
But all alone there must be someone

People just not the way they used to be
Sanity has changed to me
I hear voices where they shouldn't be
I hear voices where they shouldn't be
Voices
Voices

Your face seems to let down on me
Why's it so hard for you to let me be?
Looking around in the basement chairs
The only time I know you're no harm

People just not the way they used to be
Sanity has changed to me
I hear voices where they shouldn't be
I hear voices where they shouldn't be
Voices
Voices

Voices
Voices

Voices
Voices

See what you're doin' to me,
I open my eyes and I can hardly see
Looking around in the basement chairs
And all the time I know there's no one

(All the time I know there's no one)
All the time I know there's no one
(All the time I know there's no one)
All the time I know there's no one
(All the time I know there's no one)
All the time I know there's no one
(All the time I know there's no one)
All the time I know there's no one
(All the time I know there's no one)
All the time I know there's no one
(All the time I know there's no one)
All the time I know there's no one
