So many things have changed in my short life
That I thought would always be there Yet when all that passes by my eyes none of it Will come as a big surprise, I'm expecting it To tell the truth I know that when my eyes are closed
And shut again I'll be happy that way Cause if I don't know where I'm going If I don't know where I've been Maybe you can show me now Can you tell me how
I'm going home
When I'm too small to see it all, I hold on tight so I won't fall
And lose myself Cause if I don't know where tomorrow is how can I Tell where today has been and when I'm going
I'm going home
Something looking like a mail order wolverine
Just nodded it's head at me Shout 'bout the looks and sounds that I've heard and seen Mad about the fact I'm free from his multiheaded smile that He is shining on, rising in the face of man, holding back everything
He is holding while I'm smiling at him I'm free from him Home I wish I was homeward bound If I had sight and I could feel would that finally make me real
Or can you answer that to me, you won't fall behind me anyway
So I've gotta' watch you every day so I don't join you today
I'm going home
