(J. Bon Jovi, D. Bryan)

I was lost, then I found you.
I never thought it would be this way.
Showed you my heart, I left it unguarded,
Like a thief in the night you stole it away.

Now you're gone, the pain goes on and on.
I still hear you whispering to me through the shadows of the night.

Love lies, you're just a victim of the headlines.
You're running on into a cold night.
You're just a number of the love lies.

All alone you call it survival,
He lost at love to a stranger's lines.
Walking the streets, searching with vengeance
For a face that he dreams of night after night.

Time goes on, all signs of life stolen, simple dreams were all broken.
Best of times become desperation but how many tears
must you cry to survive?

Love lies, you're just a victim of the headlines.
You're running on into a cold night.
Just a number of the love lies.

Love lies, you're just another victim of the headlines.
You're running on into a cold night.
Just a number of the love lies.

They met late one night in the city.
Both men knew only one would stay.
Scratched a picture of a heart on a bullet
And took his life away.

Love lies, you're just another victim of the headlines.
You're running on into a cold night.
Just a number of the love lies.

Love lies, you're just a victim of the headlines.
You're running on into a cold night.
Just a number of the love lies.
