Black clouds in the distance I can feel a change in the wind There's never been a season quite like this one's been And the leaves are swirlin' and the hairs rise on my skin I should go outside but I just keep on standing

When that moment comes I'll be blown away Cause I don't have the sense to come in from the rain I'll be broken in half before I bend No I won't survive another moment like this

The screen door slams in spite of me The dogs are staring out the window But I don't move my feet Cause I know my place is out here in the storm With all the other fallen angels who have been here before

When that moment comes I'll be blown away Cause I don't have the sense to come in from the rain I'll be broken in half before I bend No I won't survive another moment like this

And when that moment comes And the winds subside And the storm moves on And there are no more lies They'll gather on this porch And lift their eyes to the sky And say farewell to the Fallen Angel Who never learned to fly

And when that moment comes she just blew away She didn't have the sense or the strength To come in from the pourin rain

She never did bend, she just broke in half Cause you can't survive too many moments like that No you can't survive too many moments like that
