"Who Made You" by The Twin (Boy George)

Who made you?

Who made you?

I was working overtime
The Devil sitting by our side
He build the planets
Build the sky with stars
And to the earth send angry men
To break the hearts of others
Destroy a Earth our mother
Destroy everything

You ask me, "Is nothing sacred?"
If you found true love
Tell me would you take it
Over fame and glory
I know how to end this story

Who made you?

Who made you?

Now do you see the good in you
The evil and the cost to annihilate
To judge too fast and give too late
You ask too many questions and
YOU TELL SO MANY LIES

You ask me, "Is nothing sacred?"
If you want truth,
Tell me why can't you face it
Don't have to meditate on it

Who made you?

Tell me,

Who made you?

Is gender so afraid to love
Find this world is not enough
Till they collide in outerspace

Or float off to a better place
Or they return to earth again
UNTIL THEY UNDERSTAND
That they know nothing
Nothing at all
Your tiny world is far too small
You've got big ideas
I know nothing

If you're above I must feel the ground
So you must be looking down
On me
Like all those I love, spiritual entities
Can they tell us
Who made you?
Who made me?
