though I walk alone I am never on my own how can I not confuse family with friends even though that is exactly what somebody told me this was more than a chapter but the heart of the whole damn book
I had my best friend by my side when I learned my father died I've seen strangers become friends and then turn into brothers in just a few short weeks away from home it is crazy when they tell me that this is just screams to a beat
when I know it's what shot you into my veins glue that binds, a weapon that defines us and I would be so lost without them I've seen strangers become friends and then turn into
brothers
in just a few short weeks on the road bonds so much stronger than the time they took to form and will last me the rest of my days
a beat
and I would be so lost without you
cuz the places we've been become the times we have shared and they crash like waves and mark these days and I don't go anywhere without them I took the whole damn ride with my best friends by my side the days turned into nights and we held on with all our might cuz nothing stays no way, no how there's no forever the only thing that lasts forever is right fucking now
