Don't fall asleep.
I hear the echo in the halls begin to fade and I know it's all upon me.
Now the night begins to call, I hear my name, and I know this time I lose control.
Bathe in the feeling your heart's beating out as it escapes you.
Don't be afraid to let go as the spreading fever takes you.
Fall through the prism, part the spectrum of emotion.
Black out your fear and pour yourself into unbroken
nightmare,
Unconscious slip and fall. Nightmare, unraveling us all.
My dreams hang in my window with all my nightmare
charms
And I know this faith is fiction, but I don't see a savior in the sun.
The blue cascade softly swallows me whole.
I watch the dead who bury themselves before their prayers could etch their tombstones.
Eclipse the moon, dark water.
Navigate without the stars as shadow casting torches
in their catacomb halls.
They start to take on water and wide awake they close their eyes.
And wide awake they close their eyes.
My dreams hang in my window until the nightmare
dies, and I know this faith is fiction,
But I don't see a savior in the sun. Run, and don't look back.
Escape this endless nightmare.
Trapped and closing in, slip through this endless
nightmare.
