The door was open wide all this time but in my mind I just never felt the need to stay inside evicted it's way too late never got used to the new place and so I wait for you to let the light shine through I need this one last time is it for real this time I want to feel at home again crack the door and let me in I need this one last time But I still cannot believe after all the years I've seen the battle rages on and I know I'll never get that back And I'll be banging on that door until my fist turns to nothing but blood and bones on the floor until I can't bleed anymore
