

Break Even "A Long Drive Home"

Visit "A Long Drive Home" on MotoLyrics.com

Waking up to the image I can't erase
I'm seeing ghosts of the feelings I once chased
Shaken up by the answers you'd present
At the most, I believed in you, to some extent
'Cause I feel that I can't go on
I trusted you to some extent
With this void inside bleeding on
Shared love with you, I regret

Salt jaded and empty silence

All I've known was living life a bit more
Meaningful than the days before
That night you said you felt like shit
When you looked at me, I must admit
Nobody's ever said the things you said to me
I trusted you to some extent
Now I'll never give away the best of me
Shared love with you, I regret

Salt jaded and empty silence

And the long drive home,
And the long drive home, I
Swerved round the lane hours
Fatigued with the thoughts in my mind

And the long drive home,
I swerved round the lane hours,
Wishing and praying to a blackened sky
That one day, things would turn out like...

The lives I've seen and the love you shared with me

Visit Break Even page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.