September, field like any other where one short story came to it's end
What darkness runs through the mind of those so young to paint so black a portrait
And little legs can only carry you so far, choking down tears terrified

I've heard screams in my sleep Telling me to wake up from this dream I'm in I've heard laughs from all three Shielding his face from the stones they threw at him

Strangers fall upon one soul, like so many demons
upon an angel fallen
He wonders what he's done to deserve this
"Please, I just want to go back home"
The child trips and falls, knees are bleeding
Stars and clouds fill his head
Can no one hear him screaming
He's screaming his throat red

This day, dark day innocence lost it's way
This field this hell, is where an angel fell
This day, dark day innocence lost it's way
This field this hell, is where an angel fell
This day, dark day innocence lost it's way
This field this hell, is where an angel fell

Strangers fall upon one soul, like so many demons
upon an angel fallen
He wonders what he's done to deserve this
"Please, I just want to go back home"
The child trips and falls, knees are bleeding
Stars and clouds fill his head
Can no one hear him screaming
He's screaming his throat red

He lays alone, no one to hold his hand, no one to tell him goodbye
He lies alone reaching for hands not there, too weak to cry, no one to wipe his eyes
And falling autumn leaves, is not a funeral

Handfuls of windblown dust, is not a burial
