Margaret Barry broke my heart, with her stories and a harp.

Like a moment in the dark, Margaret Barry broke my heart.

Margaret Barry stole my breath, with a banjo against her breast,

Let the candles sing a prayer like a crowd of stars in her hair

In your face another time, I can trace every line,
Runs me through like a knife, I think I've known you all my life

Now Margaret Barry has gone away but her voice still wrecks my day,

Like a murder in the park Margaret Barry broke my heart

Margaret Barry broke my heart, Margaret Barry broke my heart.

Margaret married the clear air, rode her bicycle everywhere.
