This isn't love; it's just your chance to move on to the city lights.

You never lived up to the hype.

Do you remember when you were my hero? Inside I believe you still are.

No! This can't be real, let's wake up from this dream now.

Does it hurt to be on your own?

So scared of being alone, just let it slide go for the ride,

Act like I'm surprised.

Oh how you can lie to me.

The sun sets in the east but I can't rest my feet

To the beat of you walking away,

Drink up baby cause it's oh so sweet, pretend you are happy,

Leave me like you did before, this time wanting more.

You told me you'd be there and you weren't;

Now save your promises, they weren't worth it.

Word on the street is your giving up your dignity;

You're a dime but girl trust me, this isn't worth your time

And I'm not losing sleep over you anymore.

The sun sets in the east but I can't rest my feet

To the beat of you walking away,

Drink up baby cause it's oh so sweet, pretend you are happy,

Leave me like you did before, this time wanting more.

I'm another year older and the sunshine state feels a little bit colder

Than it ever has before.

I turn my shoulder and you know it's over

Cause we were nothing more than a boy and a whore.

The sun sets in the east but I can't rest my feet

To the beat of you walking away,
Drink up baby cause it's oh so sweet, pretend you are happy,
Leave me like you did before, this time wanting more.

So let the sunrise blow your mind as the waves crash ashore like all of your lies,
Pretend this was all a dream. Hopefully one day you'll see you're better than this.
