I don't know why I ever thought that you were not insane
Now I know that we're the same and that just brings you shame
I finally found out who you are and didn't have to ask The only face I saw these years has always been a mask

The pencil eating job you have is only a career
When I look into the mirror I hope that they can hear They don't understand our fear it's painted on the wall

Their words go 'round in circles, fucking dizzy, I might fall

The shit you put us through almost kept us down for all those years
Hoping that our individuality would never reappear Stay away from me unless you wanna lose your mind You'll never see your kids again you fed them to the swine

Don't ever grow up to be like them
Don't ever eat up all your pride
